

password_hash()

password_hash()

In PHP, you can use the `password_hash()` function to securely hash passwords. This function generates a one-way hash of the password using a strong hashing algorithm.

It's important to store the hashed passwords securely in your database and never store plaintext passwords. This helps protect your users' passwords in case of a data breach.